This week the price ranges for acid and rennet casein both held steady. Spot sales of acid casein are declining in Oceania but contacts in the region say this decline is being offset by increased interest from international purchasers. Milk output is declining in Oceania, contributing to lighter acid casein production. Despite this, spot purchasers say acid casein inventories are available for purchasing. In Europe, rennet casein sales are trending higher from purchasers in domestic and international markets. European milk production is strong, enabling rennet casein makers to run busy production schedules. Rennet casein inventories are well-balanced with production keeping pace with current market demand.
