Direct Hay Weighted Average Report for week ending 2/7/2025

Compared to the last report: Hay prices are steady across all regions. Hay demand has been moderate to good. Warmer than average temperatures moved into the state last week. Portions of the North, Central, East, and Southern regions received moisture ranging from 1 to 3 inches. Extreme to Exceptional drought still persists in the Far West and the South Central portions of the state. Warmer than average temperatures coupled with recent moisture has some of the winter weeds greening up in the South. However temperatures need to stay warmer for longer to spur cool season forage growth.

Due to limited sales and price changes this report will be released bi-weekly until more volumes of hay is moving.

 The next report release will be released February 21st, 2025
